COTTON MARKETS.

New York, Feb. Z.—The cotton trade of America is entering a new crisis which may influence the pice level. If the allied governments place cotton on the list of commodities which may not be allowed to enter Germany from neutral countries there undoubtedly will be a falling off in the export demand to these countries. The Washington Herald's Special Correspondent Tells of

"Stop Instantly," Caronia Signals, Within Sight of New

By. CAPT. FRANZ HUGO KREBS.

Capt. Krebs, special correspondent of The Washington Herald and The McClure Newspaper Syndicate, is now in Germany, from whence he will describe events from first-hand information. In the following letter he tells of the exciting events of his voyage across the Atlantic. Capt. Krebs is a Harvard man, well known in Boston, New York, and Washington. He numbers among his friends Senators O'Gorman of New York, and the Massachusetts delegation in Congress. He was at one time a candidate for Congress himself, failing of election by only about thirty votes. He is a brother-in-law of former Mayor Quincy, of Boston, and a nephew of Frank Bolies, for many years secretary of Harvard College.

On board S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam, Jan. 26th, 1913.

On Saturday, January 16, the steamship Nieuw Amsterdam sailed from Pier 5, Hoboken, N. J. Little did we think as we slowly steamed from the dock that within sight of New York we should be held up by a British cruiser. We were two hours behind schedule time in starting. The consignment papers which had to be vised by the British, French and Dutch consuls were late in arriving. Before we reached the threemile limit, we sighted the British cruiser Caronia. She was painted a very dark gray, was some miles away and as we drew nearer we received three signals in quick succession.

What ship is that? Where is your cargo consigned to?

Stop instantly. The Caronia is commanded by Capt. Litchfield, R. N. He is a post captain, which means that he is a captain of the highest rank in the British navy, the rank being above admiral. It was interesting to see the guns manned and trained on us. Of course we knew that it was only little thrill to realize that a single+ shot, properly placed, could sink the more or less trouble and insteamer we were on. The Nieuw Mould you be willing to grant us an interview and let us know what you think of this sort of thing?" Most po-

It turned out that that was the case and the first to be called to the witness stand was a second cabin passenger, one Manasseh Marcowitz, both in recommania, but a naturalized American citizen; the next was William Salsman, born in Austria, but also a naturalized American citizen clitzen. In a few minutes both these men emerged from the captain's cabin heaving sighs of relief. Their examinations had been short and satisfactory. Next on the list was Paul L. Beck, native American born. By this time I was chatting with the Brittsh signal man, brought on board to do their wig-wasging for them, and he captain and heaving were many interesting passen.

It turned out that that was the case and the first to be called to the witness was the usual thing in the was pointed out to a passenger and been pointed out to a passenger and the first had been pointed out to a passenger and been pointed out to a passenger and the first had been pointed out to a passenger and the property and the property of our motives and the high character and the purity of our motives and the high character and the purity of our motives and the high character and the purity of our motives and the high character and the purity of our motives and the high character and the purity of our motives and the high character and the purity of our motives and the light character and the purity of our motives and the high character and the purity of our motives and the high character and the purity of our motives and the purity of our motives. On the way up I decided, as the result of a hurried conference, that as the captain of the Nieuw Amwhich I was a passenger, and as we were not in British waters, I would not hand my passport, as the others had, to fellows on board, among them Regi-the British officer, but would only hand naid Rowland, of Plainfield, N.
